FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

M. E. Sharpe freezes online subscription prices for 2010 and announces preservation agreement with Portico

In consideration of the major budget constraints facing libraries this year, M.E. Sharpe, Inc. has frozen prices for online subscriptions in 2010. Price increases for print (plus online) will be minimal, ranging from 0 to 4%, with the majority of M.E. Sharpe's 38 titles at 2% or less.

M.E. Sharpe is also pleased to announce the signing of an agreement with Portico to preserve its entire online journals collection. Through this agreement with Portico, M.E. Sharpe furthers its preservation strategy. Since 2005, M.E. Sharpe has worked with JSTOR to provide a trusted archive for 4 of its journals' back issues.

Founded in 1958, M.E. Sharpe remains a privately held publisher of books and journals in the social sciences, including economics and political science; management and public administration; education; and history, literature, and philosophy. In addition to original journal content, M. E. Sharpe publishes translations in Asian and East European studies.
